

4 hours ago (Edited)

Okay...here's the deal...

If you remember, the FBI photos of the supposed Mauser rifle used in this assassination, which they said they found in the wooded area near the site, was assembled and complete...with a quality optical scope attached to it, in the proper fashion.

However, when we see the suspected shooter flee the rooftop, immediately after the shooting, we see him carrying a long, black, thin-fabric, bag...which was most definitely NOT long enough to hold this assembled, as photographed, rifle.

I have no doubt the long, black, fabric, bag contained the weapon the shooter used...as he fled the scene.

But, the notion the shooter would then take the time to RE-ASSEMBLE his weapon, before leaving it wrapped in a TOWEL, in the wooded area for people to find, simply doesn't seem to make any sense.

If the shooter was on his way to his parked car in some nearby parking lot...why not just keep the rifle in the long black bag...get to his car...and flee the scene without hesitation. Then, if he didn't want to keep it...toss the rifle bag into a roadside drain, or trash bin, a mile down the road...while people were still running around like a disturbed ant's nest?

Did the FBI assemble the rifle they found? Where is the black bag? Was there really a sniper's grade optical scope ON the rifle they found?

Remember, if we have seen all the photos of the shooter making his approach to the site...WHERE IS THE RIFLE? Did the shooter disassemble the rifle and put it in his back pack? WHERE IS HIS BACK PACK? What else was inside this FULLY PACKED back pack...which we see him carrying up the stairs?

Why wasn't the shooter smart enough to toss his hat, and take off his black t-shirt...for a t-shirt in another color, and short-sleeved?

Then fleeing the scene wouldn't even have been an issue...at all.

If you look at the good pictures of the shooter on the stairs...descending in the Sun light...you might notice his Left jean front pocket...might be holding the BOLT ACTION HANDLE...firing pin assembly, to the disassembled rifle. I think you can clearly see the bolt lever impressed there...attached to the bolt itself.

The shooter looks and moves in a quite feminine manner, too.

And, what is with the confusion about the shooter's rifle ammo? First, the ammo is supposedly covered in all sorts of graphics and texts... Then, it isn't. Then it is? WHERE are the PHOTOS of the shooter's graphicly covered AMMO?