Israel's New Push To Keep Africans Behind Bars

By Yael Even Or

Refugees Detained in Israel's Desert from Jewish Daily Forward 2015/12/01

Israel's Parliament has passed a new law aimed at keeping African immigrants behind bars — and a controversial jail to house them — by year's deadline says the country's highest court.

The Knesset, by a 20-10 vote, approved initial legislation step for a new law that mandates three months in prison for Africans — seek who enter Israel without documentation, and a year and eight months more in the spartan Holot detention center, which Israel euphemistically refers to as an "open facility."

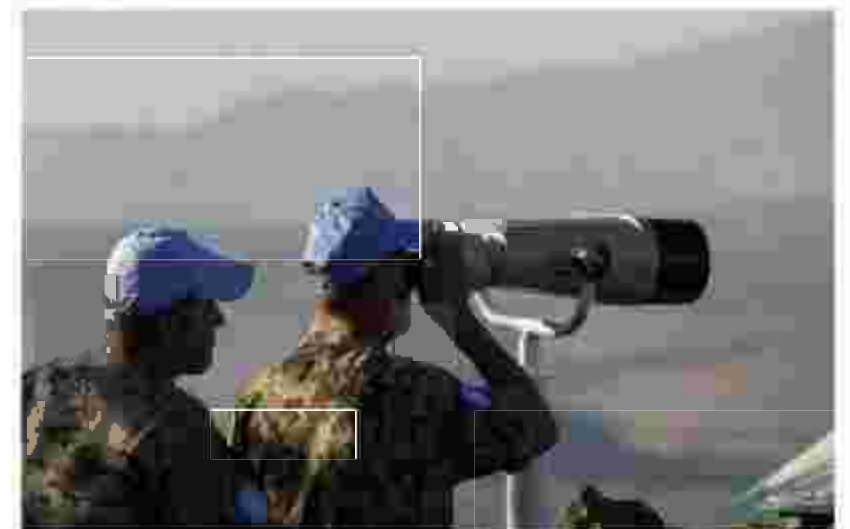

If it passes two more hurdles, the new law will permit Israel to keep more than 2,000 African detainees imprisoned — while — still waiting — many more.

Migrant crossings thwarted

A new border fence, deportations, and military moves to block entry by migrants have sharply reduced the number of Africans illegally crossing into Israel in recent months.
