Liberal Boomers inherited the most cohesive, high-trust society in history—90 percent white, English-speaking, Protestant-rooted, doors unlocked, crime at historic lows—and deliberately unmade it. They passed the 1965 Immigration Act, opened the borders, preached “diversity is strength,” imposed affirmative action, and demanded bilingual ballots, turning a nation into a hotel. Nature’s first law is that every stable society rests on one dominant ethnic core that assimilates outsiders; Rome had Latin Romans, Japan has Yamato Japanese, even Switzerland runs on alpine-European cantons with clear majorities. By smashing the white core and banning assimilation, boomers violated this law on a continental scale.

Evolution itself is divergence, not convergence: species split, populations drift, genes and cultures separate under pressure. There is zero precedent in biology for unrelated human groups fusing into a super-people; the animal kingdom is a map of increasing specialization, never amalgamation. Yet liberal boomers flooded the country with 60 million foreign-born who keep their languages, flags, and loyalties, then punished whites for noticing and banned any pride in the founding stock. Putnam’s data prove the cost: every 10 percent rise in diversity equals a 10–15 percent drop in trust. Cities became war zones, white fertility collapsed below 1.6, politics turned into tribal warfare, and the country became a low-trust boarding house.

The ultimate irony is that their “no dominant culture” dogma guarantees the very segregation liberals claim to hate. California already functions as Greater Mexico, South Florida as Little Havana, Dearborn as Dearbornistan; the Black Belt, Mormon West, and white rural redoubts are drawing mental borders. Liberal Boomers destroyed the only mechanism—a confident white majority culture—that could have forced a shared American identity. Nature does not negotiate; when the center cracks, the pieces re-segregate by blood and soil. The rainbow utopia dies in the divorce papers of 2040, and the new maps will be drawn with rifles instead of ballots. Boomers fought nature. Nature has already won.
