There is a difference between the American Nation and the American (led) Empire. The American Empire, represented by the Deep State, is very much at war with the American Nation. That is because the American Nation is the best positioned to rein in, or even dismantle, the American (led) Empire of globalists. Folks like Matt Gaetz tabling resolutions to pull troops from Somalia, or Syria, is a power that no other nation has- the power to dismantle the globalist American Empire. The slogan America First is biggest threat they can imagine, because it means using USA power for the regular working class people of America, not as a multi-generational piggy bank and cannon fodder for the global American Empire; it means prioritizing jobs for working class Americans instead of sending them on neocon adventures to die in Iraq, Afghanistan, or Ukraine. The titanic struggle we are witnessing is the American Empire trying to destroy the American Nation, because the American Nation is an existential threat to the empire. This battle takes place in a 'full spectrum' set of fronts- cultural, religious, media/information, legal lawfare, electoral, political, and hard power. The greatest success of the American Empire is to dupe half of the American Nation into foot soldiers in their own destruction ("woke America") and to discourage the other half from fighting in any way shape or form to preserve or restore the American Nation, through defeatism and discouragement, or by channeling their activities into useless scripted public expressions that are demonized and smeared.

This is the war of our generation, but it takes place in media, information, institutional control (universities and public education) and the like, and Trump is dangerous because he can get millions of Americans off the sidelines and into the fight.
