all this 'winning' is hard to get used to. it will be difficult to modify my impression of the federal government as an institution whose purpose is to strip american citizens of opportunities for success so those opportunities can be given instead to illegal aliens.

have you ever wondered why convenience store and gas station franchises are predominantly owned and operated by folks from other countries?

in a related subject, the dad of a friend of my daughter's once enthusiastically told me I should apply for a diversity grant for my daughter, because they are giving away huge amounts of money, he is a black african-american. i responded, do you really think they are going to give money to someone like me? he looked at me, paused, his enthusiasm sapped, and he has never mentioned it again.

it will be hard to change my opinion of government agencies wanting me and my family to die to make room for people who don't look like me. especially after covid, when their desire to destroy became indiscriminately universal; hard to change my opinion.

show me the money or gtfo. i will believe in it when i experience the change. not until.

as far as i can see, the globalist agenda marches on, although they are closing down their saturnalian festivities. blackrock buys the canal, mexico, greenland and canada annexed into north american union, digital currency to replace physical currency, yeah, no, not impressed. not seeing a change at all, really. especially with the leftists digging in for a mini-civil war. not impressed with the intelligence, morality, common sense, nor inherent goodness in my fellow citizens. not saying all are bad, just saying the good have it bad in these times. fuk the government.
