From Grok3:

The founders and key figures associated with PragerU have notable connections to Israel, though the nature and extent of these ties vary.

Dennis Prager, the co-founder of PragerU, is a vocal supporter of Israel. He has expressed this stance in numerous videos and writings, emphasizing Israel's role as a democratic ally in the Middle East and linking anti-Zionism with antisemitism. His public statements reflect a strong ideological alignment with Israel, rooted in his perspective as a Jewish American conservative. Additionally, historical accounts suggest that during a visit to Israel, Prager was involved in efforts to support Jewish dissidents in the Soviet Union, indicating a personal engagement with Israel-related causes beyond mere rhetoric.

Marissa Streit, the CEO of PragerU, has a more direct connection. Born in the United States, she later moved to Israel and served in the Israeli Defense Forces (IDF), specifically in Unit 8200, a prestigious intelligence unit often compared to the U.S. National Security Agency. This military background has been acknowledged by PragerU itself, framing it as part of her credentials. Her service suggests not just a personal tie but also a professional one, given Unit 8200's focus on intelligence and security—areas of strategic importance to Israel.

Allen Estrin, the other co-founder, works closely with Prager and shares in shaping PragerU's content, which consistently promotes pro-Israel narratives. While less is publicly detailed about his personal connection to Israel, his role in crafting PragerU's messaging aligns with its broader pro-Israel stance.

Funding also ties PragerU to Israel-related interests. One of its earliest videos, a history of Israel, was supported by the Adam and Gila Milstein Family Foundation. Adam Milstein, an Israeli-American philanthropist, is known for funding pro-Israel initiatives, including the Hasbara Fellowships, which train students to advocate for Israel on college campuses. This financial link underscores a connection between PragerU's content and Israel-focused advocacy.

PragerU's output further reflects these ties. Its videos often defend Israel's actions, argue against Palestinian statehood claims, and frame Israel as an indigenous Jewish homeland, aligning with Zionist perspectives. This content is spearheaded by figures like Prager and Streit, whose personal histories amplify the organization's pro-Israel bent.

So, yes, the owners and key leaders of PragerU—through ideological commitment, personal history, military service, and funding—have clear connections to Israel. These links shape the organization's mission and messaging, positioning it as a platform that not only supports Israel but integrates that support into its broader conservative agenda.
