

LOL_Groom 2 hours ago

It's not about the burrito, or even the president's fault.

It's what it represents: our economic opportunities being fleeced and subsidized to a foreign and domestic slave class under globalism.

It's the DEI/ESG oligarchy-controlled collapse and asset consolidation (see COVID-19).

While Americans—old and young—pay into a social safety system, they watch an endless stream of third-world migrants pour into our country. They use our schools and hospitals, lower our wages, and drive up our rents, taxes, and insurance premiums. Meanwhile, our generation gets priced out of almost every asset.

We see Silicon Valley get their bag while a data-center slave state is erected—one that we, again, have to pay for. Houses are built by illegals for the inevitable wave of more illegals and H-1B workers.

There's the Federal Reserve's endless money printing and the never-ending circle-jerk of Wall Street crime and the corporatization of our entire economy—all of which we have to foot the bill for.

And the goddamn optics: we always have endless money for endless wars and for subsidizing entire industries, while our native-born population is demonized and left behind. Then the boomers who offshored and subsidized our entire workforce to foreign labor (here and abroad) get upset that the native population is sick of competing with foreign slaves.

So yeah... I'll work off the books and live like the slave class. There's really nothing tangible we can do to stop the oncoming noose of control that's already wrapped around our necks and slowly getting tighter every day.